MEYERS FREED AFTER HE IS AGAIN GRILLED

Prosecutor Doesn't Believe Faculty Man Has Told All He Knows, However

REFUSES TO COMMENT

Snook, Interviewed Early Today Faces More Questioning This Afternoon

COLUMBUS June 19—Marion T [illegible] who with Dr James H [illegible] has been held since Saturday on a technical charge of investigation connection with the murder of [illegible] Thora Hix was ordered released by Prosecutor John J Chester [illegible] before noon today

[illegible] told newspapermen he believed Meyers had not told all he knew about the murder mystery but said the authorities had no excuse holding the Ohio State university faculty member longer

Meyers release followed another grilling of him by police probers

Refuses Statement

A free man again the first thing Meyers did was to ask a friend for a cigaret

He was figuratively mobbed by newspapermen But all the scribes could get out of him was one statement — that it felt fine to be on the outside again

Meyers good naturedly joshed with reporters talked about the army maneuvers at the county jail etc but adamantly refused to speak about the murder case or any one connected with it

Asked if he had made a statement during the investigation that he was afraid of Snook Meyers turned his back on the writers and walked away

He secured the release of his automobile which had also been held and made a escape from the jail

May Be Grilled Again

Prosecutor Chester later told newspapermen that Meyers had made the statement he was afraid of Snook because Miss Hix had told Meyers that Snook had informed her he followed her and Meyers when they were together

Chester announced Snook would be brought to the city prison from the county jail this afternoon so that a picture might be taken of the professor's injured hand Snook claims he hurt it while working on his automobile

It is believed Snook will be virtually grilled again by the authorities but the climax of the case will come before evening that formal charges will be filed against the university man or he will be released

Discrepancies in the story of the confessions of Snook on the night that Miss Hix was brutally beaten and dashed to death were discovered by police and newspapermen today

In an interview just as the rising sun peeped through the iron barred

Showers Tonight or Thursday May Bring Temporary Relief Here

SECOND 90-DEGREE DAY

REVEALS CONDITIONS IN PATROL RANKS

Says Leaders "Tell You To Stop 'Em at Any Cost"

WASHINGTON June 19— They don't tell you to shoot but they might as well—they tell you to stop 'em at any cost

This is the charge against his superior officers which Louis H Jacques former patrol leader in the customs service at Detroit is in Washington to present to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman today

Jacques who resigned after the shooting of Archibald Lugster in Detroit June 12 by a dry officer came to Washington in an effort to persuade the directors of the prohibition drive to stop killings by dry officers

He said he resigned solely because he couldn't stand for the promiscuous shooting which already has cost the lives of many innocent people

An ex service man and the father of a family Jacques revealed an amazing picture of the rum war now being waged on the Detroit river in an interview

I went into the service to uphold the prohibition law and I quit because I couldn't stand for the killing of innocent people he said

Every time they line a patrol up—which is every eight hours—the officers in charge ride you said Jacques

They tell you that the immigration officers are making seizures and they want to know why you're not doing something When the boys go out they are ready to shoot anybody and anything'

Says Guards Are Green

Rules Proper Legislation Providing For Use Must Be Enacted, However

COLUMBUS June 19—Voting machines may be used at Ohio elections if proper legislation providing for their use is enacted This is a decree of the Ohio supreme court announced today

The supreme court held that the constitution of the Buckeye state does not prohibit the use of voting machines

In reaching this decision the court reversed the decision taken by the state's highest tribunal about 30 years ago when supreme court judges decided that the use of voting machines at elections would not conform to the definition of a ballot as could be cited in the Ohio constitution

Today's decision disposes of all question of the constitutionality of the Hurst act enacted by the recent session of the state legislature authorizing use of voting machines at elections after Jan 1 next

Hoover to Remain in Washington While Congress Goes on Vacation

WASHINGTON, June 19 — President Hoover will remain in Washington "hard at work" while congress plays for a month at least, and he may remain all summer, it was indicated at the White House today

Congress takes a recess today, the senate until Aug. 19, and the house until Sept. 23; but the president has made no plans to take advantage of the two months offered by the senate's absence from Washington.

He may change his mind after he selects his farm board—a matter of two weeks—and shuns the diplomatic state. Ambassadors to France, Spain, Italy, Japan, Germany and Cuba, must be appointed, and a few posts in South America, it is believed, will have new occupants. These appointments are expected to occupy the president's attention, again, until at least he would have cause to go fishing on the Rapidan, or the Potomac, or the recess, it was explained.

President Hoover, it was said, has felt that his first year in office should find him at his desk, perfecting the personnel selections for his administration.

There is a possibility, however, that sometime a trip across the continent is no unusual thing for him—in fact quite up and coming—he may visit his Palo Alto home, some time before

THIRD CHILD VICTIM OF MYSTERY POISON

Two Others and Parents Seriously Ill in Chicago Hospital

CHICAGO, June 19—Three-year-old Lorraine Markowski died today, the third victim of a mysterious poison that is threatening to claim the lives of a family of seven.

Eleven physicians, including several specialists, were studying the case as Lorraine succumbed. The other dead were Chester Kwiatowski, 7, and his sister, Agnes, 8. These two were children of Mrs. Irving Markowski by a former marriage.

Two other children and Markowski and his wife are fighting for their lives in the county and psychopathic hospitals.

Doctors who examined the stomach contents of the dead and living said the poison appeared to have a metallic base and may have been caused by canned foods. It was said it also may have been due to ingredients of paint, which Markowski used in his occupation.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Markowski was able to give police a coherent explanation, and it was said they either were subnormal mentally or were suffering from effects of the mysterious poison.

Farmer Found Guilty of Wounding Girl; Claimed She Stole Corn

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, June 19 — Found guilty of slightly wounding 14-year-old Gladys Pittman, Etna Pershing, 61-year-old hunter farmer, is free today under a nominal bond awaiting sentence on an assault and battery charge.

Perkins maintains that he fired a shotgun charge when he saw the girl, he claims, stealing corn from his field. He denied any knowledge of hitting the little girl, but part of the charge entered the girl's side and ankle.

Trial of the case attracted unusual attention. Perkins having previously been sued for damages by the girl's mother. After a verdict of $500 damages was returned, Perkins allegedly transferred his farm to his wife. The assault and battery charges were filed then.

Early Agreement On Cut In Navies As World Peace Step Is Urged By Dawes

United States Ambassador Expresses Policies of Hoover Administration In Address Before London Society; MacDonald Voices Similar Sentiments

LONDON June 19—Urging an early agreement among the powers of the world for a reduction in naval armaments as a necessary step in the establishment of universal peace Gen Charles G Dawes United States ambassador to Great Britain last night outlined the American government's plans and policies with relation to international affairs

"The importance of an early agreement on naval reduction by the nations of the world is outstanding at the present time" he said "It would seem to be the next step to be taken toward world peace"

General Dawes' statements were made in the course of an address before the Pilgrims society at the Victoria hotel here At approximately the same time Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain was voicing similar sentiments in a speech at a dinner in his honor given in his little home town of Lossiemouth Scotland

Policies of Hoover

The speech of Ambassador Dawes had been eagerly awaited on both sides of the Atlantic for it was known he would be speaking as the officially accredited representative of the United States and that his statements might be accepted as an authoritative expose of the Hoover administration's policies regarding disarmament

In addition it was known that Ambassador Dawes declarations were in complete accord with the policies of Premier MacDonald and the new labor government of Britain For the points brought out in tonight's address were carefully gone over in a luncheon table conference between Dawes and MacDonald at Forres Scotland near Lossiemouth on Sunday

Ambassador Dawes devoted virtually all of his 3,500 word speech to suggestions for changing the existing methods of disarmament negotiations in future conferences aimed at reducing the naval forces of the world

Urged United Effort

Quite obviously referring to the Anglo-French naval agreement which caused such a storm last year the ambassador said

"A matter of first importance at the present time is that friends of world peace move unitedly toward that objective with a clear understanding among themselves that any effort which is not united is liable to be ineffective and tending toward disintegration

The fact that MacDonald was certain to echo this sentiment in his Scottish address proved the truth of reports circulated prior to the elections in Great Britain to the effect that one of MacDonald's first moves would be to repudiate officially the Anglo-French agreement formulated by and the undertaking of a clear sky by Sir Austen Chamberlain secretary for foreign affairs in the defeated conservative government one night last fall

This statement also squelched rumors that the projected conference between MacDonald and President Hoover at Washington might be aimed at a disarmament agreement between Britain and the United States

Part of World Movement

It made it clear that any negotiations between the two English speaking powers would be carried on only as part of a general world movement for naval reduction and that any attempts between individual nations to formulate covenants without the participation of all the great powers would be frowned upon by the United States and England

The annual dinner of the Pilgrims' society one of the most important but never before in its history has it reached such a plane as this gathering tonight

Not only did it mark the official pronouncement of the United States government on disarmament questions but it also signalized the return after a lapse of many years of dinner table diplomacy

In the early days of diplomatic exchanges between nations announcements of tremendous international importance often were made with the cigars and coffee at brilliant banquets and agreements of momentous interest between powers were occasionally reached at conferences over a dinner table

Prominent Persons Attend

Lord Desborough president of the British Imperial Council of Commerce presided at the banquet which was attended by many persons of importance in British and American life

The question is Ambassador Dawes declared how best to adjust the methods of negotiation to accord with the laws of human nature so that a successful outcome, so vital to the welfare of the world may not be unnecessarily endangered

Ambassador Dawes stressed the necessity of cooperative employment of naval technical experts and states that and suggested that the beginning of the work contributed by naval experts should be a definition of absolute equality

It is certainly possible he said for naval experts to arrive at a definition for the evaluation of fighting strength of ships Thus for instance one might find a yard stick with which to determine the military value of individual ships

These ships might differ in displacement size guns age speed and other characteristics and yet such an agreed weighted value might be given each these differing characteristics as to make it possible to compare for example the cruiser fleets or the combined fleets of two navies and establish parity between them

If the naval experts rise to a proper sense of their responsibility the use by statesmen of their 'yardsticks will not be one which will invite peril from those extreme pacifists or extreme militarists who form the lunatic fringe'

Early oil wells at Baku were scooped out by hand

PRAISE SPEECH OF GEN. DAWES

WASHINGTON June 19—Gen Charles G Dawes struck the keynote of the Hoover administration's whole policy toward world peace and naval disarmament in his first speech as ambassador to Great Britain Nothing but praise of the speech was heard today in administration quarters

That policy briefly summed up contemplates a naval holiday standing between the United States and Great Britain—an understanding based upon equality—which can serve as a foundation for a broader world understanding that will take in the other principal naval powers Japan France and Italy

Huge drums are used to announce an important wedding in the native quarters of India.

A used car that paid for itself in one summer

A MAN who bought a camp in the woods last summer said that he and his wife decided not to take their new car with them. "We had seen too many beautiful cars hurt by the rough treatment they get at camp."

They bought a sturdy but very inexpensive used car. "Aside from the great convenience of having a car in the city and another car in the country," he said, "we figure that the used car paid for itself in saving wear and tear on our new car."

In selling more than a million and a half new cars every year, General Motors dealers accept many used cars in trade

Every one is unused transportation and represents a real bargain for somebody.

General Motors urges its dealers to move their used cars quickly, at fair prices, and in a way to build public good will It cooperates with them by providing the convenient GMAC Payment Plan for both new car and used car sales.

Snook Collected

The chemist, Dr C F Long, who examined the stains on Snook's small coupe and who also conducted an examination of the contents of he woman's stomach is expected to make his report some time today

Dr Snook was cool and collected when questioned by newspapermen in his cell today He told a straightforward story and except for the one discrepancy he told of nothing that was not already known

In a play for public sentiment attorneys for the two men started a "back fire" yesterday, by the declaration that Miss Hix was a dope-peddler."

Dope Reports Baseless

William J Ford federal narcotic chief a Columbus conducted an investigation into the statements and declared they were without foundation as far as he was able to learn He made his report in the small hours of the morning

Snook in his early morning interview said the last time he saw Miss Hix was Wednesday evening

He emphatically declared that he was not the first person to have intimate relations with Miss Hix

He said Miss Hix would accept automobile rides from strangers and one was killed during one of these rides

My affair with Miss Hix was no love affair Snook insisted

It was a temporary pleasant arrangement the former teacher asserted

He was discussing his relations with the slain girl the same relations which subsequently led to his arrest for investigation in connection with the crime

Snook Is Defiant

Once Miss Hix told me she would not marry me on a bet Snook continued I never suspected her of going out with anyone except Meyers, however Here the doctor referred to Meyers another faculty member of the college and who is being jointly held in connection with the killing

I was willing to quit any time she said so I did everything for her own good declared the man

I know more about the case than many outsiders Snook said He was defiant in his attitude toward the questioning newspapermen as he had been toward authorities when they attempted to question him

Miss Hix was of the lonely type he continued She was very nice and dignified She went to movies alone She was not hot tempered She enjoyed auto rides She would talk rather than fight

Somewhat contrary to the latter statement was his declaration that I know of one ride she took and had to scrap to get out of it

Tells of Meyers

Again the doctor reiterated the status of his relations in the one room love nest and other places with Miss Hix and this time in more violent terms

It was not a fool silly love affair She was a good companion, he asserted emphatically

He told of trips he had sent Meyers on to meet the girl. According to Snook and Meyers own admissions to police Meyers, a younger professor was infatuated with Miss Hix and had begged her to marry him several times.

"Miss Hix and I had agreed not to see each other last fall. I didn't see her for months. Then she told me she had broken with Meyers. Then we resumed seeing each other

Calls Her "Ideal"

He explained how they had gone to an apartment house a short distance from the campus and had rented their "loverest.

Miss Hix used no drugs Dr Snook said, contrary to the tangent at which the investigation was recently conducted

Once she told me she had tasted a highball and liked it the 40-year-old professor declared but she did not drink liquor while she was with me.

Snook ended the interview with a tribute to the girl She was the ideal professional woman he declared

The interview took place in Snook's cell in county jail where he is being held in connection with the slaying Meyers occupies a cell near the other man

battle They want to keep their jobs and make a record—and they show it to do it

A lot of the trouble comes from Washington too Only a short time ago after high Washington officials were in Detroit our chief told us that they were sore because so many motor bats broke down and said that some of the boys must be on the take (accepting bribes) I know that the boats broke down because the men running them were inexperienced But all this complaint makes them quick on the trigger

Opposes Wild Shooting

Inquiry who is returning to the real estate business in Detroit declared that he is interested only in halting unnecessary killings by dry officers

Expressing astonishment at the present drive being made in Detroit with a force increased from 250 to 1'0 Jacques declared that the dry regime is concentrating its drive against a rum trade which doesn't exist Only a few bats take a chance on the narrow Detroit river he asserted

I am not attacking the force at Detroit or any other place he said I don't think there is much bribery and I believe most dry agents are honestly trying to do a good job But I am fighting this promiscuous shooting

Runners Won't Shoot

One day a boy in my patrol who just came in under civil service fired three times at an innocent boat. I asked him why he did it He said I don't know, I must have been crazy

They have had the border patrol agents armed with shotguns rifles and pistols and they filled boats with tear gas bombs A few days ago some of the officers in Detroit asked Washington to permit them to arm their cars with machine guns

It isn't necessary The rum runners don't shoot They'd rather lose their liquor than be charged with murder

Daily Proverb—"Who promises much and does little, dines a fool on hope."

Two motorists more, one in Georgia, and the other in Arkansas, killed on suspicion by dry enforcers, which goes to show that their average is being maintained.

Senator Borah has lost his fight to limit tariff revision, but doubtless the Hon. William feels that no fight is wholly lost where publicity is attained.

It's hard to understand why Canada should fear that our coast guards may shoot and kill some of her citizens out boating on dividing waters unless, of course, the latter should commit the folly of mounting tires on their boats at which the coast guards might aim.

It will probably be unnecessary to call the attention of the automobile people to the fact that congress has voted $151,500,000 for the immediate relief of our agriculturist friends.

Our one-time fellow-townsman, Norman Thomas, has been chosen by the Socialists of New York City as their candidate for mayor. As a perennial candidate for something or other, Norman is in a class by himself.

A case containing jewels valued at $150,000 was seized by customs house men in New York when brought in by the wife of a London stock broker, who until six years ago was working as a barber in Chicago. Take it from us, the United States isn't the only land of opportunity!

New York has the habit of experiencing "unprecedented" June heat waves occasionally, but for the sake of accuracy it may be said that up to the present none reached the mark of ninety-two recorded June 17, 1801.

We aren't sure that it will assuage to any extent those suffering from the heat, but in the hope that it may we call attention to the fact that Truckee, California, and Lake Tahoe experienced a four-inch snowfall Sunday night.

Speaking of deserved recognition, the French have conferred the Legion of Honor for relief work upon Brand Whitlock. The conduct of our diplomats in Europe during the World war, notably Minister Whitlock and the late Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, may ever be a source of pride to Americans.

Two hours of earth tremors were recorded by the seismograph of Georgetown university just before Mount Komagnlake in northern Japan broke into the violent eruption which has already resulted in the destruction of four villages and is threatening others. Some convulsion to shake old Mother Earth through her entire girth!

Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, favors as a twentieth amendment to the federal constitution the "outlawing of war" and "the evils accruing from" the World war, one of which, the senator holds, is the smoking of cigarets. The patriot with a proposal for a twenty-first amendment, to outlaw tea drinking, has not bobbed up yet.

From Rhinelander, Wisconsin, comes a story telling how a motorist ran down with his machine and killed a deer on the highway up there. And in our innocence, we imagined that the Rhinelanders were making a specialty of big fish stories in their free publicity campaign to attract vacationers.

Too Much Sentimental Rubbish.

Miss Mary Allen, commander-in-chief of the policewomen of Great Britain, in addressing the Women's International Suffrage alliance gathering in Berlin, this week, paid her respects to the crime situation in this country and made rather short shift of it, placing responsibility for it very largely where she held responsibility rests in Britain.

"There is too much sentimental rubbish," Chief Allen said. "We are afraid of this cry that youth must be free. Nonsense! No one has a right to be free at the expense of others. Shall we sacrifice the law-abiding majority for the freedom of the law-breaking minority? We must have order."

Isn't that precisely what we have been doing here in America for some years. Have we not paid too much attention and given too great weight to the protestations of the sentimentalists, to the sob sisters? Have we not listened too long to the exhortations of those who would apply moral suasion rather than penalizing measures? Have we not heard far too much of crime as the result of a disease rather than as the result of criminal inclinations? Has not the tendency been to sympathize too greatly with the criminal and too little with his victim?

This British policewoman is right. There is over here too much sentimental rubbish, and the sooner we come to realization of the fact, the better it will be for us.

Government—a Super-Profession.

There was a lot of merit in the address delivered by Attorney General Gilbert Bettman before a fraternal gathering in Athens, Sunday. The attorney general took for his subject, "Government—a Super-Profession." While it may be that he developed no startlingly new truths—startlingly new truths, it may be said, are rarities these days—he presented known facts in such a way and made deductions from them along such new lines as to lift his talk far above the commonplace.

"Why do so many Americans recoil from holding public office?" the attorney general asked. "The common answer is: 'Because politics is rotten.' But the man who is honest knows that he is incorruptible. Politics to him then would not be rotten. No, Americans of proved ability avoid public office not because politics is dirty, but because politics is difficult. In private endeavor you need only to do your job well. In public endeavor you must do that, and also—this is more difficult—make the people see that you are doing it well. Here is the price of democracy. Then, too, in private endeavor effort and results are commensurate. In public endeavor great effort may be wasted. The whims of the public—the professional, through essential, opposition—the very multiplicity of elements involved—vastly increase labor. * * * Herein lies the explanation of why many men of ability who have gone into public life withdraw. Too much effort must be expended to achieve results. And yet America has built, and will continue to build, monuments to those who in the end succeed in politics. In its very difficulty lies the challenge and the bar of politics."

Defining politics as the interplay in public affairs of diverse opinions and purposes as to men and measures, the attorney general held out that the same interplay exists in all fields of human endeavor, that there is always the same struggle between good and evil, between the patriotic and the sinister. Politics in America, he held, is not dirty; it is human. By the same token, he said, Americans are basically honest and patriotic and American politics is basically clean. "The public," he pointed out, "has forthwith knowledge of the sinister in public affairs. Such triumphs in private affairs usually remain hidden. Let us not lose our sense of proportion. Graft is a news item—incapacity is not."

And this brought the attorney general up to this declaration:

"The real ill in American public life is not graft, but mediocrity. America loses millions in inefficiency to dollars through graft."

Let every reader study that statement. Is it not the truth? Is it not rather mediocrity—incapacity—which causes us to bear the tax burdens we do rather than graft? Is it not true all along the line of public office?

It might be assumed that the remedy offered by the attorney general was more professionalism in office. It was not. It was that against which he uttered warning.

"We must not gain capacity by making government professional," Mr. Bettman said by way of peroration. "That is the present-day trend. We hear on all sides: 'Take it out of politics.' 'Put it on a business basis.' 'Employ city managers at high salaries.' These are all steps away from democracy rather than trying to make democracy work. The trend is to try to buy government. Government can not be bought. It is priceless. Only the people can produce it for themselves. If there be ills in our democracy, the cure is not less democracy, but more democracy; that is, a greater interest by all the people in their government and a greater willingness on the part of some of the people to serve their government. We must gain capacity for American government by getting men of achieved success in the business and professional life of the country to enter the public service. Let such men devote their matured judgment, their tried and proved capacity to that most difficult of endeavors—government. Thus politics will be legitimated and made a contest of brains, and government will become what it should be in a democracy—the super-business, the super-profession of America."

At a time when the expenditures in the name of government are mounting as never before in the history of mankind, when the debts of states and municipalities are increasing by leaps and bounds, is it not well to think over those utterances of the state's attorney general? Is it not time for the citizenship to interest itself in politics and see to it that men of higher standard and more ability than the average run are given places in official life?

A Good Man Gone.

The funeral rites of the late David L. Stouffer were held at his late home on north State street this afternoon.

It was our great pleasure and satisfaction to have known David Stouffer for over half a century. From his one-time comrades in arms we knew him as a brave man and a good soldier. Personally, we knew him as a good husband and father. In the same way we knew him to be a good, honest and upright citizen, a fine and faithful artisan, who would do things as they should be done for the sake of doing them well. He was a good neighbor and a good friend, and had the esteem and respect of all who knew him. For a time he served this municipality in council, and therein worked for the best interests of the city as a whole, rather than for any selfish personal or divisional interest. In all our acquaintance with him, we never knew or heard of him having been guilty of a questionable act or deed. He was the soul of integrity.

One can not but regret the passing of such a man, even though he lives almost two decades, as this man did, on borrowed time.

Cleanliness and the Skin.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Everybody wants a clear skin and envies one. It is natural to survey the face and hands of a new acquaintance. We learn a lot by the appearance of the skin and the care given the finger nails and knuckles.

I could number several persons of my acquaintance who seem never to clean the finger nails and yet they would be mortified to death to have a breaking out on the chin. Others have grimy knuckles, but would stay home to avoid showing a pimple on the nose.

It is a far more common thing to neglect the hands than the face. This is really too bad because much depends on the care of the hands. Soiled hands, dirty nails, fissured fingers—all these carry germs of disease.

Not long ago we read about a girl who was said to be the victim of fatal blood poisoning from the use of a lipstick. I have no inclination to defend too vigorously the use of cosmetics, but I take no stock in the suggestion that the lipstick was to blame. Undoubtedly the infection came from the girl's fingers.

Think of all the things you touch with your hands every day. You can not avoid contact with contaminated objects. Somebody coughs or sneezes into his hand and while it is still wet he turns a door knob, leaving germ laden moisture for the next visitor to capture.

Neglect of the hands and finger nails results in tears of the cuticle, hangnails, raw fissures and other broken surfaces which may be the gateway for the entrance of bad germs. It is a mistake to neglect the hands.

A woman shows her age by her hands long before her face tells the story. For cosmetic reasons, then, as well as for health's sake, the hands should be carefully attended.

A common blemish of the hands is the presence of a wart or a cluster of warts. Boys are lucky if they escape having them. At certain ages, particularly between ten or eleven and seventeen, they are frequently observed. They are not serious in youth, but if advanced life they are liable to break down into malignancy.

It does not pay to neglect the hands. They should be kept in perfect condition and can be with a little care.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

MRS. F. M. Q—Is there any virtue in the serum treatment for colds or influenza?

A—Yes, this treatment has proven to be very effective in many instances. Have your doctor advise you.

2—No. A healthy child will eat without coaxing or forcing. If a child lacks appetite there is usually some underlying cause and this should be definitely located and cleared up.

B. R. F. R. Q—What will cure a drooping eyelid?

A—Consult an eye specialist about this condition.

A. A. Q—What will cure both stammering and stuttering? Where can I go for proper treatment?

A—These disturbances are frequently due to nervousness. An elocution teacher can often improve the trouble to a great extent. Make inquiry at the board of education for information concerning their classes for speech defects.—Copyright, 1929, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Opinion.

THE "WHITE ELEPHANTS."

When the White Star line brought out the Homeric after the war it was more or less officially announced that the day of the big ships was over. There had been a little mistake about the species; instead of leviathans they were really white elephants, the unnatural progeny of that regrettable Anglo German rivalry at sea which had just caused so much trouble, and people were not going to build any more of them.

But it was an announcement which appears to have overlooked both the facts of human nature and the inexhaustible depths of the American tourist pocketbook. The last rites had scarcely been performed before the United States Lines and the White Star were locked in a deadly combat over which possessed the bigger ship. The war was purely statistical and it was always a trifle difficult to argue over the Leviathan and the Majestic when those products of American and British genius had both, unfortunately, been built by Blohm & Voss at Hamburg. But it was the first symptom of a new race for prestige and the tourist dollar—a race which is already being transferred from the press agents to the shipyards and is producing a whole school of monsters that promise to dwarf the Leviathan as the Leviathan dwarfed the Mauretania.

Lord Kylsant has informed his stockholders not only that they will get six per cent. on their common, but that the new Oceanic has been ordered and the work is going forward. It is the first British answer to the challenge put up by the Germans with the Bremen and the ill-fated Europa. These latter vessels, which were both scheduled for this year, are 46,000-tonners, in size below the Leviathan and Majestic, but designed utterly to outclass them in speed and luxury. Speeds for existing monsters are all around twenty-three knots, a designed speed of 28.5 knots, which is believed actually to be somewhat higher, is a serious threat and it is promised that the Oceanic will have speed and tonnage both. She will be of 60,000 tons, and it is reported will have twenty-six knots plus.

Since the Mauretania and before, speed has been Cunard's great reliance; and Cunard rumors now hint to two ships to have between twenty-seven and thirty knots and to carry 7,000 human beings at a passage on a tonnage of 70,000 to 80,000. No doubt there is a difference between prospectus and performance, but the level of size and speed alike has clearly gone up into a new class. The French are about to begin a "super Ile de France" of 80,000 tons and—according to reports—twenty seven knots; while the Italians are promising the Conte Azzuro for 1931, with the dimensions and speed of the two German ships.

And the United States? The United States Lines have thrown out rumors concerning two super-Leviathans to develop twenty-six to twenty-eight knots, and Mr. Chapman, who is notably full of ideas and energy, may be able to do something along those lines in spite of the great drawbacks of construction cost and operation under the American flag. And it is not wholly a matter of prestige and advertising. Not only will modern travelers insist upon speed and size where they are available, but these enormous greyhounds will make wonderful troopships and even, at a pinch, airplane carriers. So far as the dimensions have been reported only one—the new French liner—will exceed the dimension of the Panama canal locks.—New York Herald Tribune.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 19—Some of the most successful acts along the Rialto the past few seasons are those that barn-stormed the kerosene circuit for years in obscurity. Many had long given up hope of New York engagements and were content with small-town plaudits.

The most glamorous phase of trouping is that accidental circumstance that catapults the seemingly mediocre player to the Crazy alley's quick fame and a name in lights. The shredded phrase, "Success over night," is becoming an increasing reality.

The shoeless Weaver Brothers and Elvira from the bleak Arkansas hills knocked about the five-a-day halls for season after season, and convulsed the yokel audiences. But the act was considered just hill-billy stuff until they were suddenly substituted for a turn at the Palace one day and "gooled." The Death Watch.

Charles Butterworth with his Rotarian speech with gestures was another small-timer whose bucolic humor was thought appropriate only for the cross-roads, but he has lingered on Broadway for more than a year. Chic Sale is an illustrious example of the way Gotham chuckles at its country cousins.

Clark and McCullough were rowdy burlesquers who graduated from the wagon shows yet so infectious is their rowdy howdy that, even a second rate play they held forth on west Forty-Second street for nearly two years. Jim Barton, a highly-paid favorite, used to do the same stuff for $35 a week in the sticks.

Frisco and his "heater" came out of the cellar cabarets. George White and Dan Healy landed while messenger boys viz amateur nights. Fannie Brice was a Brooklyn news girl and sidewalk dancer. Joe Cook is a produce of back yard pin shows. Helen Morgan, Harry Richman, Gilda Gray and Ruby Keeler were night club performers.

In most every instance these acts were under the noses of theatrical scouts for years and ripe for plucking. On the other hand so many tank turns "laid eggs" that until recently it was the rarest thing in the world for the wow in the tall grass to get a Broadway chance.

The mercurial ups and down of the theater have been registered by a star and her husband. He was comparatively obscure when she became famous. He became celebrated in the movies about the time she quit the stage for the screen and "flopped." The talkies came along and she is now one of the large bets. His voice failed to register. And he is now out of a job.

Exercises for Thought.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Please answer these two questions. 1—If the motion of a mass through space persists indefinitely, why does the earth not revolve perpendicularly as it does laterally, i. e., why does it oscillate to and fro perpendicularly? 2—Should the moon's gravitational pull when causing high tide in the Atlantic ocean not cause low tide in the Pacific? Why high tide in both oceans at the same time?—R. M. Maer, Marietta, Georgia."

What you have in mind in your first question is evidently the effect of the inclination of the earth's axis out of a perpendicular to the ecliptic, whereby its north pole alternately leans toward and from the sun at opposite times of the year. This, true enough, seems to indicate a simple to and fro oscillation of the earth's axis of rotation, but in fact it is a revolution of the poles of that axis around the bases of two opposed cones whose apexes may be conceived as meeting at the center of the earth.

This revolution is otherwise known as the precession of the equinoxes. It is due to the extra attraction of the sun and the moon upon the equatorial protuberance of the earth which causes the axis of the earth to show, round, like that of a gyroscope wheel, or the peg of a spinning top.

Owing to the fact that a single revolution of the earth's poles around the poles of the ecliptic, or a single precessional cycle, occupies nearly 26,000 years, the motion of revolution is not detected, except by careful measurement, in the brief period of a year, and the only yearly movement seems to be a to-and-fro oscillation. In fact the precessional motion is just as much a mass revolution as the rotation on the axis, and arises from similar forces.

The other question is puzzling only because of taking the wrong point of view. You admit that the moon raises the tides by pulling the water away from the earth. But why does it pull the water away? Manifestly because the water, lying loose, so to speak, on the rocky shell, is nearer the moon than the earth as a solid whole is, and the less the distance, by the law of gravitation, the stronger the pull. In fact a globe like the earth pulls and is pulled as if its whole mass were concentrated at its center.

But, if that is so, the moon must pull the earth as a solid globe, more than it pulls the water on the side away from the moon, for the center of the earth is 4,000 miles nearer the moon than is the water on the side away from the moon. Consequently, the moon must pull the earth away from the water on the side turned from the moon as much as it pulls the water away from the earth on the side turned toward the moon. So, two tides simultaneously on opposite sides of the earth, or "high tides in both oceans at the same time," are exactly what should be expected.

This is also what really happens, except that there is a great deal more to be considered when we deal with the actual tides on the complicated shore lines of the earth's oceans, than these few primary gravitational principles. They show us the cause of the tides correctly, but owing to the rotation of the earth, the varied outlines of the coasts, the varying depth of the water, etc., a great many other things must be taken into account in predicting the actual tides.

The rotation of the earth alone is sufficient, owing to the effects of inertia, to make a very great change, in the calculated position of the tide waves. If the earth did not rotate, if it were covered with a single ocean, and if there were only one body, say the moon, capable of producing tides, the explanation would be vastly simplified, for then the tidal protuberances would stand always exactly toward and exactly away from the moon, the earth, as far as its form depended on the mean level of the sea, being drawn out into an ellipsoid with its longer axis pointing to the moon.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

A resolution recently introduced in the United States senate calls for the appointment of a committee to make an investigation looking toward the cure of cancer. The public health service and the National Academy of Sciences would be directed to cooperate. This is a far more sensible and constructive resolution than most of those which are introduced for the purpose of bringing about investigations. For government to recognize the curse of cancer and to prepare to cooperate with the scientific forces which are trying to better the condition of mankind is for government to be constructive and to set itself seriously at great tasks.

News dispatches tell us that former service men in one military home have filed suits for $500,000 against the government seeking compensation for injuries received during the World war. The details of these suits have not been widely published, but the thought of able-bodied men and women who look back to the victory of the war and who contemplate the broken bodies of thousands of young men deprived by that war from the normal activities of a happy life, is to hope that the men win their suits. We who are left can not do too much for those who gave so freely in a noble sacrifice.

Barking Dogs

WARM summer days, hot summer nights. Guests calling in the afternoon and evening, work to be done around the house during the day.

All the necessary work of a day, and all the pleasure that comes with leisure hours, broken by the continuous barking of a dog.

A hearty yawl out of a dog is pleasant to hear at only one time—when he's on the scent of game. In the city there is nothing more unpleasant, and there's nothing more nerve-wracking.

A resident of East Church st., well-known in the city, is rapidly developing a case of nerves from the incessant howling of the dog in the neighborhood.

The woman is desperate. Several times she has told the owners of the dog's persistent howling, with no result whatsoever. But the animal can be declared a nuisance, and there will undoubtedly be many to sign the complaint, and the owner will be made to do away with the dog.

Flowers Disappear

ISN'T it a disgusting shame that people can't even have beautiful flowers in their gardens any more without some one desiring to walk off with them?

There seems to be a mania this summer for walking off with people's expensive porch furniture.

In the east end this "walking off" passion runs to flowers. Recently a woman who desired to beautify her yard set out a number of canna bulbs. The flower bed when it was finished, presented a charming effect, as the bulbs grew and bloomed.

Lo! On arising one morning, not only the bright blooms were gone, but the petty thief had also "gone south" with the bulbs.

There should be a movement among the citizenry of the city against stealers of porch furniture and flowers.

Predicts Airplanes

IF someone wouldtell you what transportation facilities would be in United States a half century from now, you would doubtless be inclined to be somewhat cynical, and rightly so.

In 1886 Carl Ruth, an aged German who immigrated from his native country to purchase a farm about eight miles southeast of Marion, told City Clerk S. H. Keller that "airships" would be used to carry passengers, freight and mail within the latter's lifetime. "I'll never live to see it, though," the German farmer said.

Ruth said that in the German language 43 years ago. His prediction came true. He died about four years after making it.

Had someone made the same prophecy in 1910 they would have been laughed at, as Ruth was at that time. Yet, they would have had more grounds on which to base their prediction than Ruth had. In 1886 there were no automobiles, whereas there are a few 1910 models still to be seen. Yet the airplane was but a dream in 1910.

Ruth left a son, Christian Ruth, of 264 Cummins av., who also saw the proof of his father's prediction.

Beat the Lights

WHAT good will traffic lights do Marion if they are not observed by automobilists? Main st. has become the fear of pedestrians and careful drivers because the traffic lights flash off and on are not heeded by motorists.

Yesterday afternoon several cars were coming over our "new bridge" on Main st. when the lights changed against them. Instead of stopping they tried to beat each other getting across and nearly ended with a collision when the traffic started from the opposite direction. Not only were cars liable to crash but several people had to hop, skip, and jump to get out of the path of the on-coming cars.

Some cars are like mules. When they reach the top and the sign is for them they give a groan and stop. Traffic is jammed for some time and when the car decides to go the lights have changed. Usually the cars go on anyway and before long no one knows just where he is liable to land.

"Safety First"

PRACTICALLY all of the boards of education of schools in this district including Marion received letters from J. A. Waddell, superintendent of property protection on the Erie railroad, shortly before school was out, asking that the school children, particularly of the lower grade school classes be cautioned about the danger of playing near railroad property.

Marion school teachers did their part and it is thought that like action was taken by all other boards in this section of the state. The same thing has been done in past years in local schools and the percentage of accidents has gone down accordingly.

Mr. Waddell in his letter to the boards said that the children playing on railroad property both endangered the property of the railroad and their own lives.

He continued by saying that the amount of damage done by the school children of the country to railroad property would astonish most people if it were made known.

The Chevrolet Six offers all the Distinct Advantages of BODY by FISHER

Style—The beautiful new Fisher bodies on the Chevrolet Six are unusually smart and attractive. Concave front pillars lengthen the profile—the effect of the side paneling extends well up over the roof line—and all rear quarters are artistically molded.

Comfort—In comfort, too, these new Fisher bodies represent a marked advance. The seats are deeply cushioned. Upholstery is "built-up" for added luxuriousness. And the driver's seat is easily adjustable, forward and back.

Strength—Another outstanding feature of these new Fisher bodies is their sturdy construction. Built of selected hardwood and steel, they provide a measure of strength, endurance and safety that is unapproached in any other low-priced car.

Quietness—As a result of their composite construction, Chevrolet's new Fisher bodies are exceptionally quiet. The roof is padded to prevent rumble. And wherever wood and metal contact, a layer of insulation prevents noise.

Appointments—All hardware fittings on Chevrolet enclosed bodies are designed and built by Ternstedt. Door handles are of the remote control type—window lifts are smart and convenient—and all exterior bright metal parts are chromium-plated.

Finish—No single feature of Chevrolet bodies has created more widespread comment than their beautiful finish—made possible by the superlatively smooth surface of the steel body panels. Applied against this silken surface, Chevrolet finishes are uniform, lustrous and permanent.

ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH presented a shady background for the wedding of Miss Lucille Goss, daughter of Mr and Mrs Michael Goss, east of the city to Bernard R Smith, Silver st, at 8 o'clock this morning. The low nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. William J. Spickerman, pastor of the church, who also read the marriage vows before a large audience of friends and relatives. Tall white baskets holding white peonies and mock orange blossoms with palms were at the steps of the main altar, and baskets of summer garden flowers were placed at the side altars. The lighted candles on the altars threw a soft light over the wedding party.

The bride and bridegroom walked down the aisle of the church, preceded by the maid of honor, the bridesmaid and best man, to the strains of the Wedding March from Wagner's "Lohengrin," played at the organ by Miss Ruby Kraft, a personal friend of the bride.

White satin-back crepe covered in Chantilly lace and fashioned on Princess lines, with a wide band of tulle at the edge of the flaring hemline, and a bow of the tulle at the left held with orange blossoms, was worn by the bride. Her long tulle veil was bordered in lace to match her bridal gown, and held in place with a coronet of pearls and orange blossoms. Calla and Easter lilies formed a beautiful arm bouquet.

Miss Isabel Fye, the bride's maid of honor, was in a gown of orchid crepe, with a long basque waist and full skirt, fashioned with two full tiers which fell in the back to her orchid kid slippers. A short, flaring cape with ties fell from the shoulders of the dress. Her hat was of orchid horsehair, small and with a fisherman back. Roses, larkspur, daisies and sweet peas, all in pink and tied with orchid tulle, made up her arm bouquet.

Miss Alice Burke, as bridesmaid, was in a robe de style gown of Chartreuse green, of taffeta and tulle. The full, uneven hemline of the skirt was in Chartreuse tulle. She wore a crystal necklace, the gift of the bride. Yellow roses, daisies and pale blue delphinium, tied with yellow tulle, were in her arm bouquet. Her hat was of felt and ribbon, in the same style as that of Miss Fye, and her slippers were in kid of a shade to match her gown.

Howard Ryan attended the bridegroom as bestman. Francis Voll and Francis Hartman acted as ushers.

During the ceremonies, John F. Lacey, well known tenor, accompanied at the organ, by his wife, Mrs Helen Zuck Lacey, sang "Ave Maria," "On This Day Beautiful Mother" and "Ah! Whence to Me This Bliss" Miss Kraft played softly on the organ during the exchange of vows, and played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March' as the recessional.'

Covers were placed for 50 at the wedding breakfast served in the ballroom of Hotel Harding. Orchid and green, the bride's chosen colors predominated in the color scheme of the appointments. A large silver basket, holding garden flowers, marked the place of the bride and bridegroom at the U-shaped table. Boxes of wedding cake, tied with orchid and green ribbon were given as favors.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Austin Eccles, of Delaware, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Glader, of Galion, and Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Custe, of Mansfield.

Immediately following the breakfast, Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on a wedding trip through the Eastern states. Mrs Smith wore a navy blue and white print dress with white hat, beige hose and white slippers.

Upon their return they will be at home in a newly furnished home at 701 Windsor st.

For the past year, Mrs Smith, a graduate of Walker Reed hospital, Washington, D. C., was employed as assistant surgical nurse at the Marion City hospital. Mr. Smith is a clerk at the Marion Steam Shovel Co. Both Mr. and Mrs Smith are graduates of St. Mary's Parochial high school, Mr. Smith in '22 and Mrs. Smith in '24. Mr. Smith has made his home with an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. John Ginder, 190 Silver st.

The bride was in a gown of white satin and lace, with a veil caught by a wreath of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses and snapdragons.

"White Fire"

An Absorbing New Emotional Serial of Love and Life on the Stage

BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

The direct gaze shifted, the sensitive lips writhed before she could control them. "You see," she said as if they were fighting breathlessness— "I gave account for you some way. I—for our being together like this. I was afraid they'd think it queer. I didn't—so I told the first name that came into my head. I said you were my husband."

"I couldn't seem to remember. Your accident was such a mix-up in my mind—only that it was short for Tabor and Weber thinks it a miracle you pulled through—and I guess he's right. He wanted to send you to a hospital. And the people who run this place as soon as they found out how bad you were * * *

Tabor's eyes signaled a question.

"It's a sort of a hotel," the girl replied— "more a boarding house. For professionals—I mean theatrical people. I used to stop here whenever I was in New York before—a long time ago when I was working pretty badly, but on the road as a general thing. * * * But I convinced them I could take care of you all right.

"You see, I was taking a course to be a trained nurse when I got my first chance to go on the stage—and jumped at it, like an idiot, though I expect I'd have been as big a flop as a nurse. * * *

A knock sounded. Jennifer Challis went to the door. To a voice with a heavy accent its words undistinguishable she answered cheerfully:

"Oh, beage better, thanks. He'll be all right now, don't you worry." She brought back a tray with a bowl and a glass. "Now supper," she announced with the extraordinary smile. "Doctor says it's time you took some regular nourishment."

She put the tray down on the small table, passed an arm under Tabor's broad shoulders and arranged pillows to support them, then sitting on the side of the bed fed him as he had to be fed with a spoon and no end of patience. In this manner he consumed an egg beaten up in milk with a stiff dash of sherry and the best part of a bowl of broth.

The taste of food was sweet in his mouth. A delicious glow warmed his body. He began to be sleepy again. The husky voice became a lulling murmur. His eyelids too heavy * * *

He was another man who woke up with another morning golden in the window. And Jennifer Challis waiting on him washed his face and hands with a damp towel and, giving him his breakfast then taking her own from a tray on the marble topped table, was a more contented woman for the frequence of her smile, better tempered.

But she wouldn't let Tabor talk before the doctor had called; and the one having rung up to ask after the patient's condition—Jennifer had to run down the flights to answer the telephone—didn't call till toward evening.

Tabor resting easily in a bed that had been remade with a minimum of discomfort for him and objectionable mute had nothing to do through most of the day but watch the girl as she moved about the room tidying up or sat in the patent rocker over a magazine whose bold cover pledged a contents more engrossing than it seemed to prove.

With matters of immediate moment occupying her thoughts, she seemed almost cheerful only when she sought to lose herself in the pages of the magazine did Tabor ever mark that grayness growing on her face as though selfconsciousness in some measure were required to keep it opaque to the dark that preyed on her mind.

He wondered about her a great deal. She was to all purposes his first experience of a woman of a certain sort he had to remind himself it was singularly easy to be unmindful of that * * * a woman who had been constrained to meet life on its actual terms not its terms for women as asserted by a squeamish social order and a cowardly afraid to see true conditions squarely lest it recognize its own handiwork bungling when it isn't brutal.

He was even able he found to look back the way he had come without fear or pain. The life that had been his he saw with sharp definition if in proportions curiously diminished as though viewed through the wrong end of a field glass; and what he saw affected him not at all on his personal side.

When he had lunched he napped. When he had napped somebody another woman dropped in to see Jennifer and was received in the adjoining room.

After that the doctor called; put his beautiful bedside manner through its paces with manifest self satisfaction and took himself off in high feather over Tabor's condition.

"You may talk now," he said in parting— "in reason. It won't hurt you to take a little interest in life now. You seem to have made up your mind to give it another try. But don't start killing yourself—you are anywhere near well yet—it's going to be a good while before you see anything of the world outside these four walls. It's no good your getting into a stew of impatience and undoing all the good I've done for you."

When the convalescent had been a nurse * * *

When the convalescent had been

I don't faint—you called out to me. You spoke my name behind my back in a way that made my flesh creep. Jennie Challis—like that. It was like God's doing * * * I don't know * * *

Perhaps it was," said Tabor quietly. "Who knows?"

The girl bent an intent face toward him. "Do you believe in God? Yes—I suppose you do. You would * * * I myself did that night. It seemed too strange to be all accident, as if somebody or something must be responsible for the way things happened—like when you called me back * * * The minute I turned there you were, sitting up in bed stark crazy raving about Lance and somebody named June—I made out later who she was. And you started to get out of bed and I had to hold you down and then the doctor walked in. He took most of the night to get you quiet. By the time he left I was worn out—too tired to care any more about dying. I fell asleep in that rocking chair the minute he shut the door and didn't wake up till the sun got around to the windows. Everything was different, or seemed different, then I had you to take care of and what I'd heard in your delirium was enough to show me we'd both been made to suffer by the same man and it all seemed so strange, with that bond between us and our meeting down there by the river and everything—I simply couldn't leave you till you were yourself."

"I am very grateful," Tabor said. "But the girl had pursued her thoughts into a realm of abstraction to which his accents couldn't carry. He repeated after some time: "I am very grateful," and added: "I shan't forget. I'll find some way to make it up."

That brought a start of remonstration. "Make it up to me. What for? Saving your life when you were sick and tired of it and wanted to throw it away? I hadn't any right to do that. It wasn't any of my business what you did with your life, it was yours to do what you wanted with just as mine was."

"But you say I unwittingly saved yours. Do you hold that against me?"

"Well, what if you did? That only makes us quits, doesn't it? Besides," the girl argued in quaint seriousness, "the way I see it, that's all nonsense, about our saving each other's lives. What do a few days more or less count in a lifetime? We're free agents still, aren't we? Nothing can stop me from walking out, if I've a mind to, this very minute, and * * * quitting * * * or you, either, as soon as you're well enough to walk * * *"

"But you won't, will you?"

A worried sign of the head replied. "I've got over wanting to, I suppose—I don't know why."

There was a pause * * * "Funny, isn't it?" Jennifer said with an uncertain little laugh.

"Very funny * * *"

Those words seemed to come from such a distance that the girl bent solicitously over to look into Tabor's face.

"Have I tired you out?" she cried contritely—"or upset you, made you unhappy, the way I've run on?"

"No," Tabor answered from far away * * * "not unhappy. If anything, more content. But very sleepy * * *"

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADELE GARRISON

The Kinellos Start Nibbling at the "Tiger Trap" Bait

WHEN Harry Underwood had gone from the room after the telephoned call from the hotel office there settled upon the rest of us one of those silences which have been described as a space of being felt. The remark flung back over his shoulder that they'd have a nibble at the bait soon brought to the rest of them I think as to me the acute awareness of the situation which existed. Hearing at all this oldfashioned hotel were birds of prey bent upon the life of Lance Degrey and perhaps of Mary's as well. The plans for foiling them appeared to be useless. I knew by a subtle that something of which we might not even their interference was afoot in the hands.

We spoke but little indeed while he was gone and when he came back after a long interval our only words were terse questions as to what had happened.

"Are we fighting with the bait?" he said. "Although they haven't taken it yet. You see the hotel is prepared for anything and they have orders to get a plain clothes man (that's an undercover detective) at all the entrances. I have a pretty good line on those fellows and when one of them appears I am going to signal the room clerk to give him that vacant room next the tiger trap."

The circus began just after we got in. It went on after a fashion. A well dressed young chap came to ask for a room registered and—what the hotel people were looking for at my suggestion—took an extra long time to write his name. He evidently was checking up on our part the numbers of rooms and so on. When he was taken to his room he said he didn't like it, tried to pick a quarrel with the room clerk, refused any other room and departed, having served his mission well. He never be seen around here again.

"You have us all registered under our right names?" Princess Olina asked with a little gasp.

"Not you and Irby—the negroes." Mr. Underwood returned with a gallant little bow. "You are registered as Miss Lincoln and Mr. Jackson which are no disguise at all to the men hunting you. No, I want them to be. Purposely I have left a trail as wide as the proverbial barn door and they appear to be finding it."

"Is there someone up there now?" Princess Olina asked with a little shudder.

"Yes. But he isn't the fellow we're laying for. Mr. Underwood said more patiently than he usually submits to questioning. "But I know that the innate chivalry of the man was interested by Olina's plight. He's just another one coming in to spy out the land. The clerk sent for me because he asked for a balcony room high up. Now of course that's a most natural request—they're the charm of the old place—I at still I want to see everyone who makes such a request. And the minute I lamped this foreign looking chap I put him down as one of their look outs. They are altogether too fond to keep the real killer around here any longer than is necessary."

Olina shivered again and I saw that Mary's face was colorless and strained. That Lillian saw what I did I realized when she spoke to her in tones peremptory.

"That's enough sleepiness for one day," she said. "Are you leaving that fellow up there alone?"

"As far as his room is concerned, yes. The house detective is behind a bureau in the hall watching the lift. I'm going up now and play sleuth myself. I have a people between the two rooms which even the Kinellos haven't located at all. Oh, I'm some boy, I am."

He strolled out, cheerfully leaving himself looking the tension but undercurrent of reference to the killer had ceased. We were all laughing at him as he left us but after a little Lillian asked another question.

"Isn't there danger for Mr. Underwood up there now alone?" she asked.

"Not a bit now," Lillian answered cheerily and I wondered how much she was stretching the truth. She would have given the same answer if she had known that her husband faced the danger of death in his trap to the Tiger trap."

The telephone rang again and I answered it.

Special delivery for Mrs. Underwood," the operator intoned.

I repeated the message to Lillian. "Have them send it up," she said and when the letter had come she looked over one line after a hasty perusal and signaled me to examine the room as a signal that between us there was an urgent message for me.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

WEDNESDAY and a nice hammy day. My grandfather said that the air was as sweet as a drink, and my aunt said it was a darn sight sweeter than the kind of drinks he liked. He told her that he was an old man not an old maid so his blood was getting kinda cold and not warming up instead of cooling off. She said that he would find himself in a place sometime that would be so hot he would wish he could get in a fire to cool off. He said she must mean the place where hot stuff was made that my mother rubbed on her back the other morning and she kinda had to grin about that. She said that was funny, wasn't it, Thurman Aristides. I told her I would tell her how funny it was as soon as my eye stopped looking like a hardboiled Easter egg, and then they all laughed. Almost anything is funny to them as long as it happens to me. That was when I was feeding my face after letting Jubilee down and putting on my pants and milking the cow.

After I had got my face fed I said to my mother that the snake skin off the snake which Jubilee killed saving Annabelle Lee was almost dried where I had it nailed on the barn and she said, Oh yes, I get you, and she put what pancakes there were left and what oatmeal Annabelle Lee had left on a plate and got some old scraps out of the kitchen and put on with it and set it out on the steps for Jubilee, and Jubilee and Nibs dog had a fight over it and Peanutsea dog got it. Goop said it would be Peanutsea dog's turn to fight Jubilee the next time and let Nibs' dog get it. There ain't going to be no next time. I will let him eat in the kitchen.

We had all got our clothes off to go in swimming at the pasture creek and had tied the Lost Bag of Tripe to the fence so the ants wouldn't eat him up and we were in swimming, and all at once I looked up and there was the Lost Bag of Tripe walking off with part of the fence tied to his back and we were all spooking him and hollering to him that he would get arrested if he didn't bring that fence back. Then Jubilee barked and I looked around and there were Yonnie and Feeble and Maggie coming across the pasture and that dirty crook was trying to sneak off with the fence and leave us to get caught. I don't think Gabe are so very brite. They know we go swimming there, but they keep coming. We got into our clothes and went with them after disentangling and left the Lost Bag of Tripe to get any which way. When we got baskets full we started whilst the girls went to my house made dewberry [illegible] Yummy!

7,500 CASES HEARD IN 900 COURT DAYS

Municipal Tribunal Nears End of Third Year of Existence

Municipal court rounded out its 900th day of history yesterday, with a total of more than 7,500 cases having been filed. This total includes criminal, civil and traffic actions.

As yesterday ended, there had been 2,160 criminal cases filed in municipal court since its beginning here on Jan. 1 1927. This makes an average of 2.4 cases for every day, not excluding Sundays and holidays.

In the same length of time there have been 2,556 civil actions and approximately 3,000 traffic actions. Traffic court includes each "ticket" handed out by police.

Intoxication led the criminal list with a total of close to 800, or nearly one each day since the court was opened. In 1927, there were 344 intoxication cases handled. In 1928 there were 215, and there have been barely 140 this year.

There have been three murder cases disposed of since the court was established.

Ritzy Rosalie

ROSALIE "sees by the paper" that short skirts have slipped a bit, and that the covered knee length is the thing. In several other ways she notices that the styles have become less extreme one way or another. The active sports costume has been replaced by the 'town' sports idea when not actually on the field; the straight line and wrapped coat is pushed out of the picture by the flared line and buttoned or tied coat; the extremely plain clochs by the wider brim and worked surface, the monotone ensemble by the contrasted ensemble; the jewelry ensemble sets by the individual piece or related types, and the daytime shoulder flower resigns in favor of the scarf or massive jeweled choker. But why ponder over such trivial items when one can find such interesting things as pretty blue auto tubes with two medallion gold bands encircling, and packed in modernistic boxes. Rosalie feels sure that her car needs a new set of tubes—these tubes.

SCIENCE CONQUERS moths!

[From Mellon Institute comes a great new moth-proofing discovery]

Financed by men interested in sure and lasting moth-protection for clothing and furnishings, the scientists of Mellon Institute of Industrial Research of the University of Pittsburgh set out six years ago to develop a moth-proofing method which would kill moths, prevent future damage by them, and do these things unfailingly!

Today the results of their efforts, a moth-proofing compound which does what has never been done before—gives complete, certain and continuous moth-protection—is released to the public through The Hoover Company, maker of Hoover Electric Cleaners, and pioneer in furthering the care of home furnishings.

ANNOUNCING

the 5-year moth-proofing compound

No more moth damage! By contact as you apply you get sure destruction of all moths in carpets, upholstered furniture, hangings, clothing, furs and blankets—and complete protection against the danger of attack in the future. And this protection is attained, not by a constant warfare against moths, but by a single thorough treatment of the moth-vulnerable articles in the home!

Hoover Konate has been undergoing laboratory tests for the past five years—has been in widespread industrial use for the past three years. Articles protected by it at the beginning of these tests five years ago are still impervious to moths today.

How many years longer absolute moth-protection will continue, only time can tell. But there are many reasons for the belief that it will be permanent. First, Hoover Konate has a remarkable penetrating property—instead of adhering merely to the surface it spreads widely and deeply through the fabric, giving complete distribution of the moth-proofing ingredient to every fiber. Second, it clings tenaciously; does not rub off; is not removed by water, brushing, steaming or vacuum cleaning; nor affected by spilled food. Thus, it both destroys the moths already existent in the article and renders the material inedible by any moths which may be deposited on it in the future.

Actual photograph of piece of cloth exposed to moth larvae for six months. The left half, treated with Hoover Konate, was untouched. The right half, untreated, was devoured.

Hoover Konate is absolutely harmless—will not shrink or spot clothing, is invisible and inodorous. Get a supply now—give your possessions real lasting protection against moths.

don't let your "economy" come too high

DeSoto

The man who feels that he cannot afford to buy the Chrysler-built De Soto Six is perhaps the very man who cannot afford not to buy it.

Obviously, if he buys a cheaper six he will do so entirely on the strength of its purchase price.

But purchase price is only one of the three major items entering into the expense of owning a car. There are also the costs of upkeep and of maintenance to be considered. The sum of these three actually represents what it costs you to drive.

De Soto Six is economical of fuel and oil. It will keep on running almost indefinitely with a negligible maintenance expense—records of De Sotos that have gone over 40,000 miles prove this. Consequently, in the course of a few months, your De Soto Six will easily save the difference between its price and that of a car inferior in engineering, design and materials.

This purely dollars-and-cents reason for preferring De Soto Six can be supplemented by the self-evident fact that all the time you are getting more comfort, pleasure, safety and pride of ownership from this Chrysler-built six than a cheaper car could possibly give you.

It will cost you nothing to take a demonstration—and no obligations implied.

CLINIC FIRE CAUSE TO REMAIN MYSTERY

Origin of Disaster That Claimed 125 Lives May Have Started Many Ways

CLEVELAND, June 19—The exact cause of the Cleveland clinic disaster of May 15, which claimed 125 lives, will remain a mystery. There will be no criminal prosecution.

This had been established today by the long-awaited report of Coroner A. J. Pearse who made an extensive investigation of the tragedy.

The coroner's report was completed late yesterday and was signed by himself and County Prosecutor Ray T. Miller. The report declares that the burning X-ray films which generated a deadly gas and accounted for most of the deaths, might have been ignited by an electric light bulb, a match, a cigaret, or cigaret ashes.

Pennsy Valuation Shows Growth of Big Capital

WASHINGTON, June 19—The astonishing growth of big capital in American business was strikingly revealed today when the interstate commerce commission placed a final valuation of $1,012,114,391 on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The valuation dates between June 30 1916, and June 30, 1919, so that today's valuation of the Pennsylvania system is probably over the $2,000,000,000 mark.

The valuation figure included $57,695,158 classed as "working capital."

BUCYRUS COUNCIL HAS BUSY SESSION

Street Improvements Take Up Time of City Fathers

BUCYRUS, June 19—Last minute protests against the improvement of East Irving st., for which necessary legislation was passed two weeks ago by the city council, occupied the greater part of the regular meeting of council held last night. Protests for the paving of the street this year were offered by Alfred Leuthold and R. V. Sears, large property owners on the street, who offered as their reasons for opposing the improvement of the street at this time, that it would make a better street if sewer connections could be laid the year before the improvement. City Engineer Frank Neiderheiser, in answer to the protest, stated that sewer connections have been placed under the streets during the past 10 years at the time of the improvement and he challenged any one to show him depressions in the street caused by this. No action was taken in the matter, it being suggested by council that the petition signers and the protestors come to some agreement between themselves. All legislation for the improvement, with the exception of letting the contracts have been passed.

Action toward the improvement of Whetstone st., was taken when a delegation of six property owners from the street appeared before council with a request that some action be taken in that direction. The matter was referred to the city solicitor, who was instructed to prepare the necessary legislation for the cooperation of the county commissioners in the improvement, the street being a part of the county highway system.

While the discussion of street improvement was under way, Mr. Mears made the suggestion that something be done for the improvement of East Southern av., from Hopley av. to Harris st., that portion of the street being impassable. Mayor Schuler declared himself as much opposed to the improvement there in that it would provide another dangerous railroad crossing.

City Solicitor Charles Schaber was instructed to arrange some way to pay claims of two nurses who cared for William Heckenhour, deceased minute man who lost his life in the protection of property in the city during the recent Quimby block fire. According to Mayor Schuler, the Industrial commission to which some $1,800 has been paid in premiums during the past year for insurance for public service employes, refuses to allow claims for hospital bills, physician bills or nurses bills. Schaber was ordered to investigate this and either have the money paid into the commission refunded or demand the compensation.

Following complaint by a number of city residents, the city water committee was instructed to investigate the numerous dead ends of water supply pipes in the city and arrange to have as many as possible joined. This action was taken as a precaution against epidemics.

After a year's delay granted a number of property owners on Fremont, South Springs st., and Park av., who agreed to place sidewalks in front of the properties early this spring, the city solicitor was instructed to prepare the necessary legislation for the placing of walks at all necessary places.

A resolution instructing the city solicitor to prosecute in behalf of the city for water rentals which are now due the city and to defend the city in suits brought against it was passed by council.

A resolution authorizing the Safety Director Gus Goldsmith to sell the Ford automobile, formerly used by Chief of Police Trautman was also passed.

Changes will not be effected, council had, until the carrier provides more adequate protection at its grade crossings. Mayo

INSPECT PLANT

Club Members Make Tour of City Waterworks at Kenton

KENTON, June 19—That rapid progress is being made in paying off the indebtedness of electrifying the municipal waterworks plant, out of resultant savings effected in the department, was the statement made Tuesday noon during an inspection of the plant by members of the Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis club and other interested persons.

Of the entire cost of electrification amounting to $9,765, there remains unpaid only $3,800. This is due in $1,000 payments coming due in August, 1929, and February, 1930, the money to be derived from earnings and savings in the department.

Interesting facts brought out during the inspection tour were that savings for a year totalled $5,270. Labor bills or savings in salaries for one year amounted to $4,455 and savings in boiler repairs, compounds, etc., estimated for one year total $600. In addition to these the coal bills, after deducting cost for electrical current, mean a savings of $216. The new plant has been in operation for nine months.

Urbana Youth Sentenced by Union County Judge

MARYSVILLE, June 19—Leslie McKee, Urbana, has been sentenced by Judge E. W. Porter, of the Union County Common Pleas court, to from one to seven years in the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus for grand larceny. Sept. 19, 1927 McKee was taken before Judge Porter for the theft of 100 feet of lead cable from the Pennsylvania Railroad company along the Union county tracks. At that time the sentence was suspended due to the age of the youth, who was then 19, and claimed to have been led into stealing it. He has been under the custody of an Urbana attorney since that time, who reported his conduct to Judge Porter.

His recent report showed that McKee has been "taken in" by Urbana city police a number of times and that recently he was arrested in Springfield for attempting to sell two auto tires, which he admitted he had stolen. Two others were sentenced with him, his brother, Herman McKee and Donald Springe, Urbana, to not less than two and not more than seven years in the penitentiary.

BY BOB ELLIOTT

AFTER a brief sojourn in the depths of second place, Calvary Evangelical's championship team returned to its old form and defeated Epworth No. 1, yesterday at Lincoln Park, 8 to 0 behind a three-hit performance by "Rube" Gruber.

The victory gave last year's champs a one game lead over Trinity Baptists and Epworth No. 1, who are tied for second place. Calvary has to meet Wesley next Tuesday, this probably meaning that they will start off on the second round of play with the same one game lead they now hold.

Exactly 12 men faced Gruber in the first four rounds and in the next three the same number came to bat, which is not bad hurling in any man's baseball league. Fogel, Hinkle and Roseberry collected the three hits for John Clark's outfit.

"Jerry" Neimeyer led the winner's assault on Bill Toomire with two triples, a double and a single in four trips. He drove in two runs and scored the same number. The rest of the team managed to get seven hits off Toomire, bunching practically all of them in the fifth and sixth innings when seven of their eight runs were scored.

Trinity Baptists, the surprise team of the league, won their fourth victory in six starts by defeating Epworth Seniors, 3 to 1. It was Jerry Roberts' second consecutive win and Roy Rice's seventh setback in the Church league. Rice has been pitching a fine brand of ball but his team isn't hitting its weight in toothpicks behind him.

Christians nosed out St. Mary's 6 to 5 to keep in a tie with Epworth Juniors for the lowest position in the upper division. It was the third straight defeat for the Saints after two straight wins at the start of the season. The winners scored four times in the second and two in the third frame.

After a rather disastrous start Epworth Juniors are now playing ball at something near their right pace. Behind an excellent piece of mound work by Jones, the Juniors ambled home to a 3-to-0 victory over Wesley at Fairfield. Two of the three hits collected off Jones were scratches to second base with Mickelson getting the only solid blow for the losers. Baumgardner pitched good ball, allowing only five hits.

The winners scored one run in the second on G. Lashey's error and the final two in the sixth when Llugo and Lowe crossed the plate.

Eagles Announce Benefit Boxing Show and Baseball Tilt

FLEET VETERAN

Frankie Frisch, keystone sacker for the Cardinals, is one of the reasons why the Redbirds are setting the pace in the National League over such fast-stepping teams as Pittsburgh and the Cubs. Frisch is one of the fastest men in baseball despite being a veteran in the game. In addition he is a top-notch infielder and at present is hitting the ball well over the .350 mark.

Winged Foot Course Will Demand Perfect Shots

BY DAVID J. WALSH

"POEMS are made by fools like me; but only God can make a tree," wrote Joyce Kilmer. He must have forgotten all about A. W. Tillinghast, the golf architect.

Yesterday, the writer played the famous or infamous west course at Winged Foot over which the National Open Golf championship will be conducted, one week hence, and judging from what he saw and all he heard, this tournament may produce another Oakmont where Jones, Hagen, Farrell and all the big shots went phooey and a couple of klibitzers horned into a play off for the title. Anything is possible and in most cases probable on a course like this.

Trees, standing elbow to elbow, marshal the fairways almost from tee to green; trees lurk in waiting around every corner; and on three sides of the average green, you will find trees, tall and stately, trees, stunted and pestiferous and trees that merely are trees. If it never had anything else, Winged Foot would be a spider's web, a cruel, calculating device to snare the unwary ball on the wing. But the layout has everything, including a hazard that was not in the original script—badly sunburned fairways.

With its small, jagged greens, its large traps, heavy with arm-breaking sand, its rough full of clover and fairways that make you a present of one hanging lie after another, the course makes a demand that no man can hope to fulfill—perfection for every shot.

Farrell the current champion and Sarazen, once holder of the title, were out three in a foursome yesterday, hitting shot after shot on the line. All they got for it was an afternoon of hard work in which they had to play fighting golf to break 80. Sarazen having a 77 and Farrell a 78. Their best ball showed only two birdies, Farrell having seven 5s in his card and Sarazen nine of them. Previously, Farrell had played nine holes with the writer's foresome in 41, so everything was according to Mel Ott, as we say at the lunch wagon.

BILL TERRY LEADS SLUGGERS

AVERAGE JUMPS TO .400 WHEN HE GETS 9 HITS IN TWIN BILL

Three Teams in National in Close Race as Cubs Trim Cards

MEMPHIS BILL TERRY, slugging first baseman of the Giants, is leading in the race for the National league batting championship today as a result of his hitting spree in the New York-Brooklyn double header yesterday. In 10 times at bat Wild William blasted nine hits, including one home run, and run his average 24 points up to an even .400—one of the most spectacular feats of the year.

Despite Terry's slugging, the McGrawmen dropped both sides of the twin bill, 8 to 7 and 7 to 6 and lost considerable ground in the pennant race. The rival pitching aces, Vance and Benton, were knocked out in the opener, and Babe Herman's homer broke up the second game in the ninth. The high flying Robins have capped seven of their last nine starts.

The Cubs virtually created a triple tie for first place by swamping the league leading Cardinals, 13 to 6, while Pittsburgh lost to Cincinnati 2 to 1. Two home runs by the mighty Hack Wilson, the second coming with the sacks fully populated, accounted for six of Chicago's tallies.

The Cincinnati-Pittsburgh game was a brilliant pitching duel. Red Lucas allowing the Buccaneers four hits and Brame yielding six. Hits by Swanson, Dressen and Kelly broke up the game in the eighth. The Pirates have been held to an even break by the Reds in four games.

Chuck Klein's seventeenth homer featured the Phillies' 4 to 2 win over the Braves.

The heralded "slump" of the Athletics was limited to two consecutive defeats when they nosed out the Senators, 7 to 6. Lefty Grove was knocked out but Rube Walberg stopped the Nats, who have beaten the Mackmen only once all season.

The Mackmen now lead the Yankees by eight full games, as the Hugmen lost to the Red Sox, 7 to 4, after Fred Heimach had blanked the Sox 9 to 0 in the opener. An error by Durocher paved the way for four Boston runs in the nightcap.

Earl Combs of the Yankees hit safely in his seventeenth consecutive game, and Buster Gehrig's eighteenth homer kept him in a tie for the lead with Hafey of the Cardinals, who also ripped out No. 18.

KIWANIS TEAM WINS FROM KENTON CUBS

Game Called in Sixth Inning With Score Standing 28 to 3

Kiwanis baseball team, winners of second place in the Marion County American Legion tournament, went on a batting rampage yesterday at Kenton and submerged the Kenton Cubs in a torrent of base hits, the manager of the home team finally calling the game in the sixth frame with the score 28 to 3.

The Kenton nine put on a cute little sketch in the field entitled 'A Comedy of Errors' and during the course of play committed just an even dozen. The Cubs collected four hits off Eeenbarger and the Marion nine got 16 off five hurlers. Kunkle led the stickers with four hits, although Detwiler was the leading run getter with four. The summary:

Kiwanis	727	120	—28	16	2
Kenton	201	00x	— 3	5	12

Eeenbarger and Anderson; Murphy, Taylor, Henkle, Ehlan, Lingrel and Resch.

AKRON AUTO RACES TO BE RUN SUNDAY

First Start Postponed On Account of Heavy Rain

AKRON, June 19—What probably would have been the greatest auto race ever staged at the Akron-Cleveland Board Speedway was halted by a sudden downpour of rain Sunday afternoon, five laps shy of the necessary 67 laps to have the affair called a legal race and as a result, the 10,000 persons that paid their way in Sunday will be entitled to attend a free race next Sunday.

All existing records would have been shaved off the boards had the Sunday race carried through to its regular conclusion or anything approaching the pace "Dutch" Bauman and "Bill" Chittum set in the 62 laps which this pair had traveled.

Whether it was Chittums forcing of the genial little Dutchman or that Bauman hoped to complete the necessary 67 laps, one third of the full distance to make it a race, at any rate fans were given the greatest driving spectacle ever offered in the four years existence of the board saucer.

From the drop of the starting flag that fell, by the way at just 11 seconds past 3 o'clock, Bauman and Chittum led the pack and about 50 yards behind them was another pair closely gaining on the two leaders. Mauri Rose and Harry Clifford were spurring off a duel and would have undoubtedly given the two leaders a battle for their positions had the race gone a little farther.

SILVER STREET and Central Wildcats stayed in a tie for first place in the school recreation baseball league by winning from Vernon Heights and State street respectively yesterday morning. In the other game of the day's program St. Mary's won its first game by defeating Oak street. It was the latter team's third straight setback. Vernon Heights, which previously had been undefeated, was no match for the Silver street nine. When the final score was rung up the victors were 10 runs ahead and Vernon didn't have a run. However the eastend team has filed a protest against the use of an ineligible player. McClory a right fielder, is the player under question. Vernon Heights claims that McClory is in the ninth grade.

Central Wildcats scored in every inning but two as they romped to an easy 6-to-3 win over State street. The losers scored one run in each of the closing three innings.

St. Mary's hit hard in the pinches to defeat Oak street, 9 to 3. Errors helped the cause of the Irish to a great extent, the winners scoring their nine runs on a total of eight hits, several of these coming in innings when no scores were made.

Speculative Outburst Sends Utilities Soaring

HEAT THINS RANKS OF PRO TRADERS

Money in Good Supply at Seven Per Cent Rate

Copper, Electrical Manufacturing Stocks Advance; Rails Higher

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, June 19—Public utility stocks held the center of the stage today in a fresh outburst of speculative buying, which forced prices of a dozen or more well known stocks in this group to the highest levels of the year. The copper and the electrical manufacturing stocks received their upward stimulus from the utilities, to which they are more or less related, while railroad stocks received the benefit of investment buying over a comparatively small list.

Wall Street felt the effects of the heat wave now passing over the country, which help to thin out the ranks of professional traders on all of the exchanges. The professionals in the utility stocks had a busy day, but their activities were not very widely extended and as a result volume of trading fell off. Industrial and business reports, as affecting past performances as well as future prospects, could hardly have been much better and money was in good supply at seven percent.

Slightly higher prices were bid at the opening for the steel and copper shares. United States Steel advanced ⅜ to 177¾, Bethlehem was unchanged at 107¾; Youngstown up ⅝ at 133¾, Kennecott Copper gained ½ at 55⅝; Anaconda was down ¼ at 111¾.

Oil stocks were quiet and dull, with Atlantic Refining up ½ at 71½; Pan American B up ⅝ at 59⅝; Standard of New York unchanged at 39½; Royal Dutch up ⅝ at 54⅝.

American Can lost a point at 144. Columbia Graphophone was down ½ at 59½; Fleischmann up ½ at 84½; International Combustion up ⅝ at 64⅛; General Electric up 2¾ at 307¾; Montgomery Ward up ½ at 107⅝; Union Carbide up ½ at 85⅝; Studebaker up ⅝ at 76⅝.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Hot weather this week has almost brought market prices to a standstill. Practically every item has remained steady over yesterday, and will likely continue to do so until Ohio truck farms and garden patches begin replacing the few remaining imported fruits and vegetables.

Head lettuce, leaf lettuce, celery, tomatoes, new peas, and cabbage concoctions are popular now, grocers say. However, the greatest influence of the hot weather is to drive buyers to the fruit market, where nearly all items are now popular.

Oranges and grapefruit have been much in demand, while higher priced berries and cherries are popular with a few buyers. Strawberry prices have temporarily ceased their downward trend, leaving Marion county berries standing at 20 cents a quart. Southern Ohio berries are available in quantities for 18 cents a quart.

Black and red raspberries at 35 cents a pint, will not be in popular demand as long as that price continues, but there is a ready market for the few available quarts. California bing cherries, at 60 cents a pound may also be included in the list of high-priced summer delicacies.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, June 19—Following a lower opening with weakness in foreign markets and further rains in Canada, local wheat prices firmed to the previous close on scattered buying and then advanced further as the shorts covered on the tightening market. Other grains followed the trend in wheat, although coarse grains were relatively weaker. Trade was light.

At the close wheat was 1⅛@1¼c higher. Corn closed ⅝@¾c up; oats ¾c lower to ⅛c higher; rye ⅛@1¾c up Winnipeg wheat futures finished ⅝@1⅜c higher, while Liverpool closed 1½@1¾ cdown.

Yields Very Erratic

Weather news and crop news continued the leading market influence Scattered buying, which more than off set the weakness at the start and which induced the late short covering, was based mainly on less favorable reports received from the southwest and advices of lack of moisture in the domestic Northwest. Winnipeg rallied well.

From the Southwest came complaints of hot weather received too suddenly, damage by blowing and other scattered adversities. Observers now state that yields will be very erratic and the average is hard to determine.

Farm relief hovered in the background of market factors, but its effect, while passive, is readily discernible in the market. To this is ascribed the consistent hesitation in pressing the selling side and the greater readiness of speculative buying to respond to slightly bullish news. The latter appears mainly confined to small commitments, however, pending more definite knowledge of farm relief administrative principles.

Liverpool's weakness was due to rains in Canada and further pressure of Argentine wheat. Export demand was moderate and sales of 500,000 bu. were made. This was mainly Manitobas, but included some durum. Foreign crop conditions are now highly satisfactory, though yields will undoubtedly be smaller than a year ago, Broomhall says. Bradstreet's available supply figures show a world decrease of 13,487,000 bu. for the week.

Corn Meets Pressure

Corn met pressure because of the favorable weather over the belt, and while the market was later influenced by firmness in wheat, prices were slower in rallying and it was withdrawal of selling pressure more than active buying which advanced prices. Trade continued largely of a local character and was not active.

Cash demand continued fair. Shipping sales totaled 115,000 bu. and bookings to arrive were 70,000 bu. In view of the light stocks, the report on government advice to farmers to hold corn was slightly bullish. A total of 400,000 bu., most of which is hedged in the local market, is reported to be loading out of Manitowoc, Wis.

In the cash market wheat was steady, corn unchanged to 1c lower, oats steady to ½c down, rye dull and barley steady.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 87; corn, 204; oats, 36; rye, none; barley, 2.

Mankind long ago gave up trying to control religion by legislation; but it still has notions that it can control appetites.
